2. Non-Personal or Aggregate Information We Collect and How We Use It

When you use our websites or interact with us in other ways described below, we may collect and record certain non-personally identifiable information. For example:

- Browsing History. When you visit our websites, like when you visit most other websites, certain information about your visit is automatically logged, such as server name, browser type and IP address through which you access the Internet, the date and time you accessed our websites, the pages you visited, and the internet address of the website, if any, from which you linked directly to our websites.
- Cookies. We or our service providers may use “cookies” and similar technologies to help us recognize and serve you better. “Cookies” are small data files that may be placed and stored on your computer hard drive or device. They assign the computer or device a unique identifier so that we can recognize it when you return to our websites. Cookies are designed to save you time because they help us provide you with a customized experience without you having to remind us who you are, or what your preferences are, each time you return. The cookies we use are not designed to damage your files, nor can they read information from other files on your computer hard drive or device. The Help feature on most Internet browsers will tell you how to block cookies, how to have the browser notify you when you receive a new cookie, or how to delete cookies altogether. If you block or delete cookies, however, you may not be able to conduct certain transactions or use some of the features of our websites. In addition, blocking or deleting browser cookies may not block or delete other types of cookies.
- Other Technologies. We may also collect data by using web beacons, clear gifs, pixel tags or similar means, which will tell us when you visit our websites and allow us to anonymously track usage and other web activity information. Non-personal information such as the areas of the websites you visit, your operating system, your browser version, and the URL you visited from, can be identified, which can be used by us to enhance your online experience.

- Location Data. When you access our websites or use a computer or device at Turning Stone, we might collect information about your actual physical location via IP address or GPS signals or other similar technology. The information collected will be anonymous, unless you give us your consent to collect personal information using this technology. Most devices can be configured to disable GPS type technology.
- Targeted / Behavioral Advertising. We may work with service providers and marketing partners to help us deliver personalized content and advertising to you while you are on our websites. In order to deliver personalized content to you, these providers/partners may use cookies, web beacons and other technologies to collect information about your online activity.

We reserve the right, in our sole discretion, to use or disclose any of the non-personal information described above in an aggregated form for any purpose (e.g. website analytics). We may also use or disclose it in a non-aggregated form as required by applicable laws, rules, regulations or valid court order, or to protect our guests, employees, our property, the property of our business partners or the public from harm. It is possible at times when collecting non-personal information through automated means that we may unintentionally receive personal information along with non-personal information. We strive to prevent this; however, if we do inadvertently receive personal information, we will not use it except as authorized by this Privacy Policy, unless we obtain your consent to use or disclose it for other purposes.
